Foreword

This booklet of trade statistics is published by the Trade and Industry Branch, Department of Economics and Development, to acquaint the Ontario manufacturer with opportunities in serving the import needs of the United Kingdom and to assist in the development of new business and larger markets.

The United Kingdom is one of the world's great importing nations. It annually imports an amount equal to more than twice Canada's exports to the world. Canada's share of this market has been about seven per cent for the past two years. In such manufacturing groups as machinery and transport equipment and electrical machinery, apparatus and appliances, the Canadian share has been two per cent in 1962 and three per cent in 1963.

The booklet is divided into four parts. The first part sets out total United Kingdom imports during 1962 and 1963 and the portion accounted for by imports from Canada. These figures are taken from both United Kingdom and United Nations sources. The sections and groups are those of the Standard International Trade Classification, a system now used by 80 per cent of the world's trading nations, and thus provides for comparability of foreign trade statistics.

The second part provides similar information from the point of view of Canadian exports to the United Kingdom rather than United Kingdom imports from Canada. This data, published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, is confined to fully manufactured products exported to the United Kingdom.

The last two parts, listing representative fairs and exhibitions and retail buying seasons in London, will be a guide to the timing of sales trips to the United Kingdom.

In translating these statistics into a possible export program, the manufacturer is advised to use the varied services of the government agencies engaged in this specialized field.

The Ontario government, through its Trade and Industry Branch in Toronto, maintains offices in London, England; Dusseldorf, West Germany; Milan, Italy; as well as Chicago and New York City in the United States. The federal government, through its Department of Trade and Commerce, has many trade offices abroad including London, Liverpool, Glasgow and Belfast.
